

Creating Involving Lesson Plans for your Student Success Course

By Dean Mancina, Professor, Golden West College

NATIONAL STUDENT SUCCESS CONFERENCE Cincinnati, Ohio June 15, 2006

1. Acknowledgement to Dave Ellis, author of Becoming A Master Student

2. An Involving Course Model – The 7-Part Course Structure
 - a. Preview/Review 6-7%
 - b. Guest Speakers 20%
 - c. Lecture 20%
 - d. Exercises/Activities 20%
 - e. Sharing 20%
 - f. Evaluation 6-7%
 - g. Assignments 6-7%

3. Activity – in groups, create a lesson plan/agenda for one of the chapters in “Becoming A Master Student”

(over)

4. Example: Read/Do pages 280-305 before class

Chapter 9 Diversity

1. Collect Homework - page 304
2. Today's Agenda
3. Christana Montes (Intercultural Center)
4. Review with a Mind Map
5. Iceberg Concept of the Nature of Culture
-break-
6. The Diversity Circle Exercise
7. Sharing
8. Quiz

5. Q&A / Sharing

6. Guest Speaker

7. Quiz

8. Homework – Create additional lesson plans/agendas to practice using this model.

9. Conclusion – It takes more work outside of class to prepare, and sometimes it feels like a 3-ring circus when I am in class, but overall it's an effective way to make time fly and to keep students actively engaged in my college class.

10. For additional information, email me at dmancina@aol.com

The attached article is from the Annotated Instructor's Edition of "Becoming A Master Student" 11th edition